NILES BASEBALL TEAM RECEIVES BACKING OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Advertising Value of Venture Attracts Civic Group

After listening to an outline of the plans of the recently organized Niles baseball team the Niles Chamber of Commerce Monday decided to back the new organization as an excellent advertising medium for the town of Niles. A committee was appointed, consisting of H. L. Scott, Dr. E. C. Grau and Bill Helm, to keep in close touch with the new team and to make recommendations to the Niles body concerning expenditures to be made for suits, equipment, etc.

Niles merchants, realizing the advantage of having the team as a drawing card for the town, are getting behind the movement with promises to furnish funds necessary for the purpose of suits.

Frank Lewis, captain of the team, Monday told the chamber of the team's personnel, and its aims in the winter league.

Secretary Petsche read communications to the Niles body, one a letter from Mayor Rossi telling of the appointment of F. V. Jones to the bay bridge celebration founding committee. The purpose of this committee being to lay plans for a huge bay region celebration at the completion of the Golden Gate and the Oakland-San Francisco spans. Jones attended a meet of the committee in San Francisco Tuesday night.

A letter from F. T. Dusterberry, of the Centerville Chamber of Commerce, was read to the group, telling that the Centerville chamber will be more than willing to add its voice in the cry to have the canyon road completely repaired. Lester Duffy said that only by concented action of southern Alameda county civic groups will results be secured in obtaining state appropriations for the work. It was moved that a committee be appointed to start immediately in the lining up of civic groups.

In relation to the Niles Canyon road it was told that the bridge near Brightside will be raised three feet, the canyon road to be closed while the work is in progress.

ANCIENT REMAINS DISCOVERED NEAR MISSION SAN JOSE

Location of Fossilized Skeleton Hints at Great Age

A discovery that may prove to be of some importance in archaeological fields was made by workers at the Hetch Hetchy pipeline excavations south of the Driscoll road last Thursday, when an ancient skeleton ws brought to light at a depth of ten feet.

Found when the excavating machine was cutting along the line of the large ditch, the skeletal remains were lying beneath an undisturbed gravel lense, or stream channel. This latter fact, according to scientists, proves the antiquity of the remains, in that they must have been placed there previous to the life of the channel, which is long since gone.

A hazard at the age of the bones would place them in the same era of the mound dwellers of the bay region, or approximately 2000 years.

Of particular interest at first glance at the remains, was the massive character of the lower jaw bone. The fact that the skeleton was badly broken up rendered on off-hand characterization impossible.

Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch and Constable O. W. Ebright gathered up the fragments of the more or less fossilized skeleton for shipment to the department of archeology at the University of California.

Although numbers of skeletons are to be found in the mounds near Newark and Alvarado, the unearthing of remains far from the present shore is rare. The fact that the skeleton was isolated dispoves the theory of a burial ground.

NILES FORESTERS TAKE PART IN BIG LIVERMORE MEET

Previous to the banquet and entertainment, the Foresters formed in units and paraded through the city. More than 100 members were on hand to take part.

Among those representing Niles at the meeting were: Addison Richmond, Ralph V. Richmond, Clarence Crane, L. De Guilio and George Crane.

ESCAPED MONKEY ENJOYS SOJOURN IN CANYON WILDS

THAT NILES Canyon is capable of supporting tropical life, at least during the summer months, was proved last week when a small monkey, lost by Al. Juhl on October 3, was found three days later fat and thriving, with its mouth smeared with grapes. A tractable beast in captivity, Juhl says that the tiny simian seemed reluctant to give up its short freedom, and had to be chased.

Juhl recently purchased the animal, a spider monkey, from Butler, of Newark, and brought it to his ranch in Niles Canyon. It strayed from there. Jhhl, fearing that dogs or wildcats would kill the comical animal, offered a reward for its return. A horseman sighted the monkey scampering through the underbrush and told Juhl of its whereabouts.

Clarence Martenstein attended the California-St. Mary's game in the Memorial Stadium at Berkeley Saturday afternoon.

Stopping at the Century of Progress in Chicago, Ferry tells of exhibits there. From Chicago, the travelers drove to Dearborn, Michigan, where they inspected the Ford plant, thence to Canada, where they stayed two days.

Gilbert Dutra, of Centerville, who acompanied the boys east, will stop off at Yonkers for several weeks before returning to his home in Washington township.

Ferry and Fitzpatrick plan to spend several months in Europe, touring leisurely about. Before leaving Ferry stated a particular interest in conditions in Germany. They will spend time there.

Mrs. Erick Bergstron and her mother, Mrs. Kelly, of San Jose, visited friends in Niles last weekend.

BARRIERS REMOVED MONDAY EVENING; TRAFFIC ALLOWED

Thoroughfare Finished After Twenty-One Days of Construction

With the last snort of the rollers Monday night, barriers at either end of the extension of First street throegh the California Nursery were removed, and traffic flowed over the new thoroughfare. Realization of a goal long sought by the town of Niles was at hand.

Construction of the road, from the time when the surveyor's transit was first set up, to the time of the removal of the last barrier took exactly twenty-one days, according to Robert M. Clemens, foreman, who supervised construction. Clemens said that with a full complement of construction equipment the time would have been much shorter.

The new road, according to Clemens, is of the most modern type; skidproof when wet, and durable, plus the added asset of being easy to repair. After preliminary work, suih as grading, water binding and shaping for oiling, the initial coat of oil, called the "tack coat" was laid down, followed by thirty-five pounds of coarse base screenings per square yard. This was followed by another coat of oil, and then by the "roofing," or spreading of a coat of fine gravel. Rolling followed, the strip being pressed several times.

Cost of the new road to the county was $1,870, $1,435 being expended on preliminary work and the balance on oiling.

Those who have driven over the completed strip this week, are all struck with the new vista opened to Niles. Comment has been passed on the attractive aspect of the town as one enters by the new road.

ALLEGED "CORPSE" ELUDES SEARCHERS SATURDAY NIGHT

Ambulance Answers Call When Body Is Seen Near Subway

What proved to be a false alarm Saturday night called out the Botelho ambulance when John Mello, of Decoto, reported that a body was lying at the side of the road in front of the Hotel Belvoir gates north of Niles. A thorough search of the neighborhood failed to reveal any trace of the alleged corpse.

Mello, drivng home wth his wife from the Niles theater, saw the body of a man lying face up in the gutter. Heeding warnings of his wife about holdups, he drove past the place, then reconsidered and turned around. Shining the lights of his car on the man, Mello shouted and tooted his horn. There was no response. Mello then drove back to the theater, and told Mrs. Wm. Helm, who immediately phoned for the ambulance.

John oLwman, ambulance driver, and several Niles men searched the vicinity. Failure to discover the alleged corpse led searchers to believe that a temporarily unconscious drunkard whose the spot for a short rest. The man was described as tall, wearing a dark blue sweater and white corduroy trousers.

NEW FLUME WILL SIMPLIFY MARSH TIDAL DRAINAGE

Completion of a new flume to drain South Marsh, near Alvarado, last week, will do away with a lot of shoveling, according to Roland Bendel, mosquito district foreman.

In the past, South Marsh has given Bendel no end of trouble as the outlet silted up, making drainage impossible without terrific labor. The newly completed flume, joining the marsh to the near-by slough, will be easy to clean of silt and mud, thus facilitating the work of eradicating mosquito larvae before they have a chance to hatch, Bendel says.

DRIVE FOR SCOUT FUND BEGINS OCTOBER 31

Meeting at Centerville Monday night for the first fall gathering, officials for the boy scouts of Washington township laid preliminary plans for the annual drive to gain subscriptions for the boy scouts.

This year, Washington township, will be a separate unit from the Hayward area, the latter having put on its drive a short time ago.

Slated to begin on October 31, to continue for four days, the drive will be under the direction of Dr. G. S. Holeman. Chairmen appointed for each of the towns will meet at Dr. Holeman's next Wednesday night for final instructions.

It is the hope of the committee that Washington township will respond generously to the scouts' cause.

FIRST LEAGUE GAME SUNDAY AT NILES SCHOOL FIELD

With enthusiasm growing in Niles for the Niles Merchants baseball team, several more business men volunteered this week to supply funds necessary to purchase a suit. H. L. Scott, R. Blacow, and Ben Murphy have added their promises to those of: P. C. Hansen Lumber Co., American Garage, Niles Theatre, Ray Peterson, Bert's Barber Shop, Joe's Corner, Quality Market, Dick Carvo. According to Ray Peterson, team manager, several more Niles business houses will contribute before the week is over.

Last Sunday the New Niles Merchants team journeyed to San Leandro, where they met the experienced San Leandro team. Although the Niles boys suffered defeat, they are by no means downhearted. They grin and say, "ust a little more practice . . ."

Captain Frank Lewis is confident that Niles will win a place in the upper ranks of Don Harder's Winter League, and after that in the Spring and Summer league.

Sunday afternoon, October 15, at 2:30 p. m., Niles will tangle with Newark's Oklahoma Hill Billies on the diamond at the Niles Grammar school. This will be the first league game to be played here, and Niles people, eager to put the town on the baseball map, will turn out in numbers to start the Niles Marchants on the right track—to the league championship.

THUGS JAILED IN ROBBERY ATTEMPT

Fighting off the attack of two youthful thugs Wednesday evening in the Niles freight yards, James MacDonald, itinerant, ran into Niles and called for the police. Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch and Constable O. W. Ebright answered the call, and a search of the yards ended in the capture and arrest of James Farnum and Frank Munsen, who later admitted their guilt.

According to MacDonald, he was aroused from a sound sleep in a box car by the muttered threats of Munsen, who demanded what small amount of money MacDonald had. Farnum stood watch outside the car. Disregarding threats of death, MarDonald attacked Munsen, knocked him down and escaped from the car, eluding blows aimed at him by Farnum.

MacDonald said the thugs were armed with heavy iron bars, which they later admitted they carried.

Constable Ebright took the two miscreants to the County jail Wednesday night.

Love and Salesmanship

By FRANCES COWLES

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

JUSTINE CARR was certainly not made of the stuff whereof good salesmanship is compounded. But it was absolutely necessary for her to work that summer, and the only job available that promised more than a bare living was this job of taking orders for women's gingham dresses. It was in the real country where she got most orders, but there she had to walk endlessly to get to the next house. Really, she ought to have had a flivver.

One very hot day in June she was "doing" the country section near Melrose. She had spent a day and a half without a single order and she had to pay for a night's lodging in Melrose besides. Justine wore a fresh pink frock herself. One of the sort that sold for $2.98. She looked so fresh and pretty in that inexpensive dress that women seemed to want to buy one like it. But the woman at the last farmhouse had slammed the door in her face, and she had walked a good half mile to the next house. She rang an old-fashioned doorbell. After waiting quite a while the door was opened and there appeared a very warm-looking young man, holding a frying pan in one hand and a broom under his arm.

"Good morning," said Justine, using the most ingratiating tone of voice. "May I have just a word with your wife?"

"You could if I had one," said the young man bluntly.

"I should have known," said Justine—"then the lady of the house."

"The lady of the house, if that's what you call her, has gone to Europe. Personally, I think she was no lady."

"Maybe there's some other lady here," purred Justine. "You see, I'm taking orders for gingham dresses. This is one I'm wearing—it costs only $2.98."

The young man whistled. "Gee," he said, "it looks like a hundred dollars to me. But I'm sorry there isn't a lady or a woman in the whole house."

"Well, I'm sorry," said Justine, throwing aside her suave manner. "About how far is it to the next house in that direction?" She waved her hand toward the dusty road beyond. Meanwhile she sat down her portmanteau and mopped her brow with a dainty handkerchief.

"About a mile," said the young man. "You don't mean you're taking it on foot? Great Scott!"

"Oh, I don't mind the walk—only no one seems to want to order any dresses."

"That certainly is a fine dress you're wearing," he said, and then: "Say, it occurs to me that maybe I might order some—I know my sister would like them. You come on in and get a drink of ice water."

"You see, my sister wanted to go abroad with her husband," the young man called from the kitchen while he was getting the water, and then resumed as he came in the living room, "and she asked me to come out and hold the house down. She had a cook and another girl—said they had promised to stay. You see, there are three children. Well, I was going to spend three months writing a survey of an expedition I took in South America last winter. I thought I could do my work here as well as anywhere. Well, I managed all right until last week. Then the girls had a row with each other and it ended by their both leaving. They hate it off here in the country. I can't get anyone to come out and help me for love or money. I'm doing all the work."

There was a pause and then the young man and Justine spoke at once, and each said, "I was thinking—" Peter said that he was thinking that he could get away long enough to drive Justine up to the next farm house. It was a shame to think of her walking on such a day; and Justine said with some confusion that she was thinking that if Peter really did need a woman to work for him she would be willing to take the position. "I can cook and wash dishes and look after the children," she said.

So Justine stayed. She just took off her hat and went out into the kitchen, found an apron and began washing dishes. Later she sent home for a few belongings. Peter insisted on paying her the salary that had been left for the two maids who had departed—because as a matter of fact she was doing as much as they both had done—and Peter was left undisturbed to work on his survey. Only sometimes he chose to go into the kitchen and dry dishes for Justine. One day he told her he loved her. He finished drying a plate and then said he wanted to marry her. Justine went on washing dishes. Then he put down the dish and pulled her away with her hands all covered with soapsuds and dripping with water, and held her in his arms.

"But just think what a shock it would be to your sister to come home and find that you'd got engaged to the cook."

"Well, then, let's spare their feelings. Let's get married—and when they get home I'll just say that I got married and my wife came home to help hold the house down."

Size of Humming Bird

The size of the humming bird seems very diminutive when compared with the world's largest bird, the ostrich. The smallest humming bird is found in Cuba, and its body is about one and one-fourth inches long, while the ostrich may be eight feet in height and weigh as much as 300 pounds. The largest known humming bird is the "giant hummer," eight and one-half inches long, found in the Andean mountains of South America. It resembles our swifts.

Living Conditions of Fish

Different species of fish require different sets of living conditions. Some species dwell in the deep water, coming to the shallows to spawn, others live in marginal shoals, rarely if ever going to deeper parts of the lake. Some prefer mud bottoms, others sand, and still others, marl. The history of an inland lake is a succession of fish habitats, determined principally by vegetation, soil, and conditions due to depth.

Irish Change Names

Following the example of other nations, the Irish Free State spent considerable energy in changing place names from English to Gaelic words. Irish names have been restored or substituted for more recent English changes. Kingstown is now Dun Loaghaire (pronounced Duhn Lera or Lwera), Queenstown is Cobh (pronounced Kov—English cove), and Kilkenney becomes Cill Chainnigh.

Linen Supply of Ships

One move of any housekeeper at house-cleaning time is to count up the linen and china. On a ship this is a major operation; for instance, one of the largest ships afloat has a small matter of 30,000 towels and 75,000 napkins aboard of her when she goes to sea. She needs only 9,000 tablecloths for a voyage, however.

Holidays in Australia

Holidays in Australia are plentiful. At Christmas and Easter almost the whole population takes three or four consecutive days. The public holidays are the king's birthday, the prince of Wales' birthday, Anniversary day, Eight Hours' day (Labor day) and St. Patrick's day (in some provinces).

Banana Oil

The bronzing solution sometimes called "banana solution" or "banana oil" is composed of equal parts of amyl acetate, acetone, and benzine, with a little pyroxyline dissolved in it. It is called banana oil merely because it smells like bananas, but it contains neither bananas nor oil.

Stenography Ok'd by Queen

A system of stenography was devised by Dr. Timothy Bright, published in 1588 and dedicated to Queen Elizabeth. He was rewarded with a Yorkshire living and given sole right for 15 years to publish and teach any new methods of character writing.

Ancient History

Even the man who claims to have forgotten everything he learned in school is likely to remember that the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, and that the fighting of the American Revolution began with a muster of Minute Men on Lexington green.

Signers of Declaration

Half of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence were college bred; 16 had classical education, two were instructed entirely by tutors and 16 had little learning.

Machine Checks Air in Mines

Accurate computations of the amount of air running through ventilation shafts in mines several miles distant are made with a machine called a "micromanometer."

So the Ghost Can't Walk

Some South Sea Dyaks of Borneo sow the ground near cemeteries with sticks to imitate spikes, in order that the feet of any ghosts that walk over them may be lamed.

Occupation of Ants

Among the occupations attributed to ants are spinning, carpentry, farming, baking, mining, plastering, gardening, nursing, soldiering, scouting and guarding.

Weaning of Deer Fawns

Deer fawns are weaned when about four months old but continue to follow their mother, the males for a year and the females for two years.

Worcestershire Sauce

Wine vinegar, sherry wine, tamarinds, and brown sugar are the principal ingredients of worcestershire sauce; pimiento, cloves, pepper, ginger, curry powder, capsicum, mustard, shallots and salt being used for flavoring, and sometimes caramel for coloring.

Antarctic Discovered by American Explorers

Commander Charles Wilkes in command of the American exploring expedition in Antarctic waters first sighted land January 19, 1840. Captain D'Urville in command of a French expedition sighted a high mass thought to have been land covered with snow on the same day. Actual land was not seen by the French until January 22, says Pathfinder Magazine.

Other explorers give full credit to Wilkes especially in view of the fact that D'Urville did not drop a day from his calendar when crossing the one hundred and eightieth meridian to make the time correspond with the eastern hemisphere, making the actual date of his seeing anything January 20. The United States has claim to the continent, as international law recognizes discovery as the prime test of ownership. If any question to the validity of the claim should arise it would probably be settled by international arbitration. No trace of man or land animals has ever been discovered.

Tea Plant Is a Tree

The tea plant is really a tree and left to itself will grow to a height of 20 to 30 feet, but scientific pruning keeps it to an average of three feet. This makes the young leaves and shoots more compact and accessible. The plants are perennial and the leaves are picked every 10 or 12 days throughout the year. The quality is determined by the part of the bush that is picked. That which is chosen from the buds and tips is called "flowery." If young leaves are included it is orange pekoe. Then as subordinate in value, come pekoe, souchong, congou and dust.

Passing Judgment

Don't judge a man by the clothes he wears. God made one and the tailor made the other. Don't judge a man by his family, for Cain belonged to a good family. Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed. Don't judge a man by the house he lives in; the lizard and the rat often inhabit the grandest structures. When a man dies those surviving him ask what property there is left behind; the angels who bend over him ask what deed he has sent before him.—Exchange.

The Echium Plant

The Echium is a long cone-shaped Greek flowering plant which usually grows to a height of about five feet. It is a large variety of hairy herbs or half-shrubs of the borage family of the Old world. Its form is somewhat snakish and suggested its name, Echium, which is derived from two Greek words, echis, meaning viper, and eschion, meaning plant.

Thunder Birds

The Shama thrush is frequently referred to as thunder bird in India because it seems happiest when a thunderstorm is in progress. But he sings his sweetest songs when he is coaxing for meal worms in low, wheedling tones—though not for long. If the reward is not forthcoming as soon as he thinks it should be, he changes to a harsher, more demanding note.

Word Juggernaut Means "Lord of the World"

The name Juggernaut itself is an Anglicized corruption of the Hindu Jagannath, the name of Vishnu or Krishna in one of his manifestations. It means literally "lord of the world."

It is the name of an idol in the temple of Puri, India. The temple itself is a magnificent one, built in 1198, at a cost of $2,500,000, while the idol consists of an irregular block of stone, pyramidal in shape, having two large diamonds for eyes.

On its festal days the idol is conveyed to another shrine on a magnificent car, 45 feet high and 35 feet square, having 16 wheels, each 7 feet in diameter. The number of pilgrims who visit the temple was formerly estimated at 1,200,000 a year. At the present day 100,000 or more may assemble there on the great festivals.

The statement that fanatical devotees of Vishnu throw themselves under the wheels of the heavy car, hoping thereby to attain eternal bliss, has been shown to be untrue. Loss of life has occasionally occurred, due to the pressure of the huge throngs, but this has been accidental. Death within the god's temple, or the spilling of blood in his presence, is considered a defilement.

The word Juggernaut has nevertheless passed into the English language as a symbol of blind devotion or ruthless sacrifice.

Reaching the Blarney Stone

The visitor who wishes to kiss the blarney stone begins with a climb of 108 steps to the top of the tower. The stairs are steep and the winding stairway narrow and a bit dark. At last you step out into the sunlight and enthusiastically circle the dungeon to find and kiss the famous stone. But when the stone is pointed out enthusiasm fades. The stone is near the top of the keep. There is an open space of 20 inches between the floor and the overhanging ledge of the building. Iron bars hang from the top of the ledge. The would-be kisser lies down on the stone walk, face upward, reaches backward and grasps the bars firmly. Then while two men hold the feet of the pilgrim, the devotee to tradition must pull across the 20-inch space, drop the head down backwards, down and down until the lips are parallel to the stone.

Harp Made at Home

An aeolian harp, the harmonious sounds of which are delightful, may be easily made at home with thin, vibrant wood and cat gut as the principal material needed. A sounding box is made of the thin wood, across which cat gut is stretched and tuned much after the style of a violin. When the harp is completed and placed on a window sill with the window closed down on it, wind passing through will set the strings to singing and provide a pleasant tone which will vary in intensity, and in the number of strings vibrating as the strength of the wind passing through varies.

The Malabar Squirrel

The Malabar squirrel of the Malay peninsula is approximately twice as large as our North American gray squirrel. It is chiefly gray in color, though tinged with spottings of black and red.

Dog Team Travel Is No Picnic for Passengers

Dog team travel is a strenuous matter for driver and passenger. Each dog is hitched to the sled, usually by a separate trace, and possibilities of disaster are numerous. Trails are narrow, often winding between rocks or through deep woods. The dogs weave in and out constantly, and every few miles icy traces must be untangled with bare hands. The driver must walk up every hill, and at the top be ready to fall on the sled before the frantic plunge down the opposite side. There are no springs in a "komatik" and bruises accumulate rapidly. Not the least hardship for driver and passenger is the aroma of dead seal meat which is carried for dog food.

The dogs are guided entirely by the voice of the driver. Whenever the leader is in doubt he looks around for a directing gesture. In addition to the cries of "Hodi, Hodi" (right) and "Keepoff, Keepoff" (left), the Labrador driver incessantly "talks" to his dogs, to keep up their spirits and speed. This conversation ranges from promises of supper, and shouts of "look at the birds," to wordless gibberish which leaves a driver hoarse by the end of a day's journey.

Opportunities

To the young men who think there are no opportunities for leadership today, I say that there are opportunities greater, more challenging than ever before in history. Great battles lie ahead of us, and in those battles the youth of today will have opportunities for service, honor, and a leadership no less courageous than that recorded in the book of "American Decorations."—Gen. John J. Pershing.

A Whole Room to Yourself!

The first hotel to specialize in renting entire rooms to individual guests opened in Boston in 1829 and startled the innkeepers of the world. Before that time it was the universal custom to rent one room to several travelers, usually strangers to one another, who slept together in one large bed.

Tax Increase

Interstate Commerce Body

The Interstate Commerce commission is a government agency established in 1887. It consists of seven members, each receiving a salary of $12,000, minus the 15 per cent economy cut. The duties of the commission are to regulate interstate traffic on all common carriers. It regulates railroad rates, provides safety measures, receives reports of accidents and performs other duties. Its powers have been increased from time to time since its formation by acts of congress. Telegraph and telephone companies, express companies, pipe and gas lines, busses and boats doing interstate business all come under its jurisdiction.

Garden of Delight

By COSMO HAMILTON

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THERE was to be a fete that night in the open-air restaurant of the Rusisan grand duke. A screen of canvas was drawn across the gate.

But that meant nothing to Ivan Storogev, the successful gigolo, who, at three o'clock in the afternoon, had crawled from his comfortable bed. A year ago he had been a waiter, a loyal member of the commonwealth of Russian aristocrats under the leadership of the dead czar's cousin in that place. He made his way through the house, saw Princess Irina Petrovna hanging paper lanterns on the shabby pergola and marched quickly to her side.

"You!" she said lightly. "How nice of you to come."

He said thickly, "Why don't you answer my letters?"

Irina continued to put the candles in their sockets with a steady hand. "If you're not going to help me," she said, "you're badly in the way."

He said, "I can't and won't stand the way in which you're treating me. Do you hear? I regard myself as engaged to be married to you."

Irina assumed an anger that she did not feel. "You bore me, count," she said. "You know the way to the gate."

Ivan stamped his foot, and the two red spots of rage were even redder now. He cried out, "Has the degradation of this cursed place dulled your moral sense? Why not say that you're in love with some one else? You think that I've lost caste by dancing at the hotel. I have. But so have you. I've seen you looking at Shakovskaya, that peasant with his 'magic' violin. If you and he have any idea of going to our church on the hill, I tell you this in cold blood here and now: there'll be murder in this Garden of Delight and suicide as well. As God's my judge, that's true."

He turned on his heels and left. With the disturbing vibrations of his presence removed, the restaurant, with its huge, charming trees, resumed its cheerfulness. General Igorivitch, the head cook, and Prince Vladimir Dionisievitch, the xylophonist of the orchestra, were singing to themselves as they arranged the little tables.

Paul Shakovskaya, peasant and violinist, was tying pieces of colored paper to the pergola.

If Ivan had seen Irina's eyes as Shakovskaya passed, murder and suicide would immediately have turned the Garden of Delight into a Garden of Despair. She loved him. But to Shakovskaya she was the grand duke's daughter—as far removed as though she was a star.

During the fete that night Shakovskaya watched his chief with affection and deference. Turning to Irina, he said, "A master of men, princess. One whom it is a joy and an honor to serve." And because he was happy at the fullness of the garden he took her hand and raised it to his lips.

Excited, too, that the hitherto almost empty place was now filled with laughter and talk, Irina bent forward so that her curls touched one of the high cheek-bones of the peasant's face. She was startled at the effect it had on him.

"Oh, my God," he said beneath his breath, withdrew his hand, clicked his heels, seized his violin and stuck it beneath his chin. And, when, hardly able to pull herself together, Irina took her place in front of the platform to sing, there was a tremor of so great a joy in her voice that it hushed the conversation and brought forth bursts of applause.

And at the back of the garden, in the shadow near the gate, stood Ivan Storogev with madness in his brain and a revolver in his pocket, all according to fate . . . Irina's heart was to be his target, not that of Shakovskaya.

He had made up his mind to hear Irina sing once more, and as the last echo of what was to be her swan song died among the trees to send her out of the possibility of belonging to another man and then follow after her.

The orchestra went softly into the opening bars of "Le Bon Temps Viendra" which Shakovskaya had set to a haunting melody. And as the loyal peasant drew his bow across his strings he caught the gleam of Ivan's weapon and saw with horror and amazement that it was not aimed at him but at Irina—Irina who was standing, wholly unaware of impending death, a few feet to his right. With a sort of divine inspiration he flung himself quickly in front of her.

There was a loud report. He fell with a crash at her feet.

And while the startled diners crowded together with screams, a second shot rang out.

Ivan had put the barrel to his head.

Chaos, the crush of running people at the gate, the startled movement of the grand duke to the platform with his faithful friends, the crumpled figure of the wasted gigolo lying on his face. And to Shakovskaya the knowledge of a hot sting in his left shoulder and Irina's lips on his mouth in that Garden of Delight.

"Breeches Bible" First Printed in Roman Type

The "Breeches Bible," more properly known as the Geneva Bible, was an immensely popular English version which was the immediate predecessor of King James, or Authorized Version, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

During the reign of Queen Mary (1553-58), the Scriptures were proscribed, and many English Protestant leaders fled to the continent. A number settled in Geneva, Switzerland, and there several undertook a new revision of the Bible in English, which they published in Geneva in 1560. It was chiefly the work of William Whittingham, assisted by Anthony Gilby and Thomas Sampson.

The Geneva Bible was novel in several respects. It was the first English Bible to be printed in roman type instead of the old black letter; the first in which the chapters were divided into verses; and the first in which italics were used for explanatory and connective words and phrases.

A peculiarity of text in the rendering of Gen. 3:7, gave it the popular name of the "Breeches Bible." Its rendition is "The eyes of them bothe were opened . . . and they sewed figge-tree leaves together, and made themselves 'breeches.'" This reading occurs in every edition of the Geneva Bible, but is not in any other version.

Walcheren Natives Are Happy as They Dream On

An island the Dutch wrested from the sea remains as one of its prized sections. Long before Hendrik Hudson, some 320 years ago, set out on his voyage to the western world the Dutch were extending their national shores by fighting the sea, and Walcheren stands as part of the result of their efforts.

Life in Walcheren lets the rest of the world go by willingly and freely. Walcheren's natives are content to live in their dreamy way—wooden shoes, old Dutch customs and dress, windmills, ancient churches and plenty of cheese.

There is no night-life gayety in Walcheren, to be sure, but there's a little bit of bad in every good little girl, and so, while the signs of the beach say "Verboden te Baden" (forbidden to bathe), the girls roll up their dresses and go wading. But lipsticks and powder are still foreign things to them, and as they congregate outside their churches Sunday mornings they all have healthy, rosy complexions, but not bought and paid for in a drug store.

Guardian of Mankind

Akbar, famed Mongolian emperor, won the title of Guardian of Mankind, because of the benevolence of his rule and at the same time the devoted zeal in which he sought to regain lost sections of the once vast empire which had broken away under long periods of misrule before Akbar ascended the throne. He devoted himself to the development of commerce with the lost provinces until the ties of business interest were so great the further tie of political interest was easily accomplished.

During his reign, he fostered religious tolerance among the many conflicting religions of Mongolia and he established and developed a school system which went far toward earning him his title of guardian. For many generations after his death in 1605 he was held up as a model of rulers throughout India and other portions of Asia.

Briton Became Pope

Adrian, the name chosen by six popes, was the name of the only British churchman to become head of the Roman Catholic church. Adrian IV was the son of a poor English family named Breakspeare, he being baptized Nicholas. Seeking his fortune in Paris, he became an excellent and gifted student, noted for his zeal and learning. He entered the priesthood and eventually became an abbot. His next step upward was to the Sacred college, and in 1154, he became pope. He was vigorous in his religious leadership and strict in upholding all the power and authority which his holy office gave to him. He died in 1159.

Polarized Light

Polarized light is a condition of the rays of light, including those of the infra-red and ultra-violet parts of the spectrum, resulting in their exhibiting different properties in different directions. Ordinary light is due to vibrations transverse to the direction of the ray, but varying so rapidly as to show no particular direction of their own. When these vibrations are given a definite direction, light is said to be polarized.

CORNHUSKERS TRAMPLE SANTA CLARA IN 32-6 VICTORY LAST FRIDAY

Muniz Scores Twice On Intercepted Passes In Last Quarter

Al., Frank and Ed., drayage specialists, established themselves in business at the Washington high school field last Friday afternoon, and proceeded to carry footballs up and down the gridiron until the spectators were dizzy. Al. is Al. Muniz, Frank is Frank Mederos and Ed. is Ed. Rose, all three several kinds of poison to the Santa Clara High varsity, which went home stinging under a 32 to 6 spanking dealt them by an inspired Cornhusker eleven.

Starting the game with a determination that was not to be denied, the Huskers tested Santa Clara's strength for the first quarter, and then got busy. At half time the tally was 18 to 0 for Washington, with another touchdown only two yards away when the gun barked.

The Cornhuskers slacked off a bit in the third quarter and allowed a Santa Clara march to cross the goal line for six points. Thereafter Santa Clara did not threaten again, and for the most part were kept deep in their own territory by the able toe of Ed. Rose.

Al Muniz, Husker left half, drove the Santa Clarans into deep despair in the last quarter when he twice intercepted passes and twisted his way to touchdowns. Both were converted.

Some of the outstanding points of interest in the game were: Mederos cutback over tackle in the second quarter for a 25-yard sprint to a score; Wes Raso's running back kicks. He reminded the writer of Lee Eisan; Louis Manuel's game at center; Phippen, Sinclair. Hikedo, and Mederos stopping plays at the line of scrimmage. A Santa Clara kick in the second quarter that blew up the ball. It sailed away sounding like a sky rocket.

The Cornhuskers didn't use passes a great deal, but with such a splendid offense over tackle and center, and with plenty of deception in running plays, passes were superfluous. Out of six tosses tried two connected for gains, one of them putting the Huskers in a scoring position in the first half.

Following are a few official Washington statistics:

Yards from scrimmage	317
Passes attempted	6
Yards gained from passes	167
First downs from scrimmage	8

Referee: Dud De Groot.
Umpire: Agosti.

This week Regli has been working the Huskers in preparation for the game tomorrow with Foothills High, at Berkeley. Tomorrow's game is the first league encounter for Centerville and the boys are determined to win. If they play the brand of ball they showed last week, it is almost certain that they will bring home the bacon.

Stop When School Bus Stops, Motorists, or Else!

Complaints to Principal A. J. Rathbone that motorists were failing to heed the state regulation that stipulates passing cars must stop to allow children to cross the street after alighting from high school busses, has brought quick action from the highway patrol in Washington township this week. Officers state that a close watch will be kept on busses, and all motorists caught violating the regulation will be penalized.

Complaints were made to Principal Rathbone, after motorists nearly ran down students stepping down from the busses.

State law requires that motorists bring their machines to a full stop when a school bus is stopped on the highway, thus guarding against possibility of an accident.

CHIMNEY BLAZE

Centerville firemen scurried to their posts Sunday morning when the siren warned of a blaze somewhere in the town. The fire turned out to be a small chimney blaze at the home of M. E. Rose, in Rose court. So near to the fire house was the blaze that the firemen scarcely had to move the apparatus. No damage was done by the flames.

Pleasanton Junior Traffic Officers Are Given Oath

New officers of the Pleasanton Junior Traffic Patrol were obligated into the patrol jointly with the Livermore Junior Traffic Patrol officers at a meeting held at Livermore last Tuesday evening.

The meeting was presided over by Judge Manley Clark, of Livermore. Representatives from the Oakland police force and traffic reserve were present. Captain Louie Eike, head of the California State highway patrol, and Officer George Barron, director of the Junior Traffic Patrols were present.

The reserve committeemen who attended from Pleasanton were Sam Glassey, John J. Amaral and V. Bernard Johnson.

Amador C Team Is Defeated by Hayward Five

The Amador C team Dons were defeated by the Hayward high C team in a practice game played at the Amador gym at Pleasanton Wednesday afternoon of last week by a score of 17 to 25.

The Amador C team played a fairly good game with the exception of the second quarter of the game when they allowed Hayward to score twelve points against their six. This was due to the fact that the Don regular guards were not in the game. Alten Shotwell did some mighty fine work for the Dons as guard.

Carl Haas captured the honors of the Dons scoring nine of the Amador points. He played an exceptionally good game at forward. The other points were divided between Regalia and Paulo, four each; and Shotwell, two.

The Dons held the Hayward boys down to only four points in the first quarter and three in the third. But it was in the second and last quarters that Hayward let loose on a scoring spree.

The starting lineup for the Dons was Paulo, c; Regalia, g; Chadbourne, f; Shotwell, g; Haas, f; and Boero, Safreno and Patterson, substitutes.

The Hayward lineup was Hamilton and Ionncelli forwards; Rose, center; and Bauslough and Frank, guards. The substitutes were Price, Rosa, and Lestigue.

The first musical instrument in Washington township was a hand organ. It was placed in the old Mission Church and played by one of Don Jose Vallejo's daughters.

NOW is the time to make a Fall check-up on LIGHTING IN YOUR HOME

HOW LONG has it been since you made a real check-up on the light in your home?

Empty sockets need fresh new lamps. Burned-out lamps, lamp bulbs darkened with long use should be replaced with fresh new lamps.

Nothing adds more to comfort in the after-dinner hours in the Fall and Winter as a cheerfully lighted home. Nothing is so decorative and yet so inexpensive as electric light. Check-up, light up, and give tired eyes a chance to see better.

Light up for cheerfulness. Let light bring out the beauty of room furnishings. Add life to your living room by having at least one floor or table lamp that throws light upward to illuminate the whole room. This is the best lighting of all to read by, and adds to the hospitality your home expresses to your guests.

See the better lamps of today now being displayed in stores everywhere and in all offices of this company. Then you will know why one of these lamps gives better light to see by than three or four lamps which merely look nice when lighted. Ask about the Special Purchase Terms now in effect.

Body Discovered Short Distance Behind Stalled Truck

An inquest over the death of Arthur F. Sloper, 33, truck driver who was mysteriously killed in Niles Canyon Tuesday night of last week, will be held at the Chapel of Palms, Centerville, sometime this week-end, according to word from the office of Deputy Coroner F. F. Botelho.

Sloper's body was discovered by the side of the road, about 150 feet behind his own truck, by Herbert Oliver, of Niles, who drove to Niles and notified Night Watchman Art Roderick. A companion of Sloper's, said to have been riding in the truck, told authorities that Sloper had stopped his vehicle, jumped out saying that he would be back in a minute. He did not return.

Funeral was last Friday morning under direction of the Chapel of Palms. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery, San Francisco.

Niles Merchants Aided In Filling Tax Reports

Warning Niles Marchants to make no payments of sales tax receipts except to the authorized recipients, an auditor from the state sales tax department Wednesday morning at the Niles courthouse, assisted Niles and Decoto business men and merchants in filling out their sales tax reports.

Emphasis has been placed on warning merchants to make no payments of any kind to "state agents" or other persons who attempt to collect the "sales tax receipts." Several cases of fraud were discovered in nearby cities, when bogus collectors called. Some merchants are said to have paid over substantial sums.

PLEASANTON IS CENTER OF FARM LOAN ASSOCIATION FOR 2 COUNTIES

Pleasanton people should be proud to boost the fact that the National Farm Loan Association has been located in this city with its headquarters at the First National Bank.

Farmers in the Contra Costa and Alameda counties have been calling at the bank during the past few weeks regarding the new government loan association.

Andrew M. Greve, chairman of the public relations committee of the Pleasanton Junior Chamber of Commerce senses the importance of the bank in this community and says:

"The Pleasanton National Farm Loan Association, just granted its charter to accept applications for farm loans from the Federal Land Bank of Berkeley and the Farm Loan Commissioner, from farmers in Alameda and Contra Costa counties, already has proved a splendid means of publicity for Pleasanton. The Association brings farmers to Pleasanton from all parts of both counties."

"Many applications for loans already have been filed and of late such applications have averaged more than one a day. Although the charter is hardly a week old money is now being passed out to approved applicants."

"Much favorable comment is current as to the foresight of our local people in bringing this institution to our city, and if the growth of this organization follows that of other federal credit organizations established in the past, we have every reason to feel that in the future it will occupy a most important position in the financial affairs of this section."

R. C. Kennedy, one of the leading farmers in the Hayward section, has issued a statement commending the organization of the Pleasanton National Farm Loan Association. Announcement of the charter having been granted by the government at Washington was carried in this paper several weeks ago. The statement follows:

"I am glad to see that the Pleasanton National Farm Loan Association is now empowered to function as a unit in the Federal government's plan to provide credit to the farmers. There is no doubt in my mind but that the new institution will play a most important part in financing the farmers in Alameda and Contra Costa counties in the years to come."

Business Conditions In Pleasanton Are Claimed To Be On Upward Turn

Business conditions in Pleasanton seem to be improving according to reports received from business men and bank officials, last week.

A material increase in commercial deposits is reported by Claude Smallwood, cashier of the First National Bank of Pleasanton. Smallwood stated that the deposits have thus grown in spite of the fact that practically all farm products including live stock command a low price, and that there is a minimum amount of farm commodities and stock being sold.

Collections are also reported as exceptionally good considering the conditions mentioned above, which has enabled the First National Bank to take care of its borrowers without borrowing funds from any source.

J. T. Nolan, employed at the H. Arendt & Co., reported that for the first time in a number of years there has been a large quantity of grain stored away in the Pleasanton warehouses, showing that the farmers production was greater this year than in the last few years.

Business merchants state that since the race track people have arrived in Pleasanton an increase in sales has been noticed. People of this community should boost the race track business in this city as it now has one of the best tracks in the state and the most suitable climate for the training of the thoroughbreds.

Amador Dons Hold San Leandro To Tie Score of Seven Up

In a practice game played at the Amador field, Pleasanaon, last Thursday afternoon the Amador Dons held the San Leandro Reserves to a tie score of seven up.

Coach Burr of San Leandro brought to Pleasanton with him a stronger team than he had been bringing in past years. This group has been used daily against the San Leandro Varsity in practice with the result that the boys were fairly well trained on defensive play.

Because the San Leandro boys are used to playing against a stronger team they have developed a good air attack which was hard for the Dons to check.

The first quarter the Don Varsity showed they had plenty of power on offense as they proceeded to score their first touchdown in rather quick order. However, as soon as they had scored and converted they let down during the remaining three quarters.

The second quarter the second team went in and they were in continual hot water all the time they were playing. In most of the play in that quarter the ball was within ten yards of the Amador goal, but fumbles by San Leandro always prevented a score.

In the third quarter the Varsity was sent in with orders to score but somehow they failed to do so in several opportunities.

The fourth quarter San Leandro took advantage of some of the Amador fumbles and got close to the Don goal line and with a wide end run San Leandro got the ball over for the first touchdown. The first attempt of conversion failed to score. Because one of the Don linemen was offside the Dons were penalized and San Leandro made their second attempt good, with the final score of seven up.

OAKLAND SOCIETY VISITS MEADOWLARK DAIRY

The Home Economical Society of the various neighboring counties enjoyed a luncheon at the Castlewood Country Club. Following the luncheon a very interesting speech was given by Miss Roxanna Elliott of Piedmont.

Before returning home this group visited the Meadowlark Diary and inspected all the buildings of interest there.

Mrs. Dorothy Leonard and Mrs. Anna Smith of Pleasanton attended the meeting.

Large Blaze Threatens Pleasanton

An explosion of a grease pan caused a damage of several hundred dollars to the Pleasanton Quality Bakery in a fierce and threatening fire which broke out shortly after ten o'clock Thursday night of last week.

The quick response of the Pleasanton fire department along with their active work checked the blaze before it had a chance to burn the entire building. Had the firemen not worked as hard as they did all the buildings on the same side of the street would have been destroyed by the fire.

According to reports the fire is said to have started from an explosion of a grease pan which was being heated to bake doughnuts. In less than five minutes the entire kitchen, which was of a wooden construction, was an entire blaze. A batch of bread, as well as the large mixers and other baking utensils was completely destroyed. Mr. Miser who was managing the bakery stated that he will reopen his business in the same location as soon as it is rebuilt. Remodeling of the room which was destroyed by the fire is being done this week, and it is expected to be ready for business in a short time.

PLEASANTON SCOUTS TO HAVE PAPER DRIVE SOON

At a meeting held at McKinley Park last week, members of the Pleasanton Boy Scout Troop made plans for a paper drive to be held soon.

The purpose of the drive is to raise money for Pleasanton scout treasury. The boys plan to secure old newspapers and magazines around town and sell them.

The scouts went out to the park at about six o'clock and cooked their supper after which they held a short business meeting. V. Bernard Johnson, scoutmaster was present.

Romance and Ann

By ALICE DUANE

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

ANN DUGAN was young and romantic.

Spring and Ann had possession of the Dugans' garden.

In the garden, but not in possession, was a youth of about Ann's age. He was never in possession, so far as Ann was concerned. He was the first, after Ann, to acknowledge that fact. He had been in love with Ann, perhaps, since their first year together in high school. He had known the fact, and declared it, the day they were graduated. Now, after three years at college—he was surer than ever of his feelings toward Ann. But he was no surer of Ann.

"But Carl," she said, looking pathetically at him out of the corner of her long eyes, "how on earth can you expect me to tie myself down to a promise to marry you after you have finished college—another whole year—and then get established in business?

"But hang it, Ann," said Carlton Pratt, "I don't see why you can't. It isn't as if I was far away. I've been home every week-end this winter just in the hope of getting a date with you, and I've been left high and dry most of the time, too. And it isn't as if you'd gone to college like most girls, though goodness knows I'm glad you didn't. I like you best just as you are. Only—"

"Only you think I ought to stay away from parties and just sit here and think about you and wait for you till you come bravely, romantically back from college to claim me. Now, Carl, wouldn't that be silly? If you were going away to a crusade or something, some sort of exciting adventure, I'd wait for you."

"You would? Do you love me, Ann?"

"Oh, Carl, how can I tell? I mean, it would be so exciting to wait for you to come back a hero and claim me. Don't you see? Nothing ever happens to you—nothing exciting to me. Oh, don't get peeved." Ann straightened up and leaned forward in the long chair. "I mean, you make a good frat and we all get steamed up over that. And then you take honors in psychology, and we get all steamed up over that."

"I worked hard for you, Ann." There was a dogged, hurt tone in Carl's voice.

"Oh, of course, Carl," said Ann impatiently. "I know that. I appreciate all that."

Six or seven hours later Ann, and the spring night, were in possession of another garden. The only other person in that dreamworld was the good looking young man beside her.

"Listen Ann," he said; "dear little Ann." The man's lips brushed her cheek. "To think this is the third time we've met. But you'll marry me, won't you, Ann?"

"But Stephen," breathed Ann. "I don't—I mean, you don't really know me. How can we be sure?"

"A thousand years, Ann—or a few seconds. What does it matter?"

"Excuse me," said an excited, rather harsh voice behind them. "Oh, Ann! Is that you? Sorry to disturb you—but this dance is mine."

"Why Carlton Pratt! How dare you?" said Ann.

What happened then happened so quickly that Ann never quite knew how it all came about. But Carl, a moment later, had Ann in his arms and the dapper Stephen Van Dyke was prone on the ground where Carl had thrown him. Excited dancers were crowding from the house, and two strangers were fastening handcuffs on the prostrate figure. One of them showed Carl a string of pearls. "Here they are, mister," he said.

Explanations, of course, Carl was the hero of the hour, and Ann blushingly shared the hour with him. Later, when they were alone, she said. "But how did you know he was a crook, Carl?"

"I didn't exactly," said Carl. "But I've met him a couple of times and I hated him because you seemed to like him. And I'd heard of these robberies, of course. He'd get acquainted with people and then steal their jewelry. And tonight I had a hunch the thief would be at the dance, he was a sort of Raffles, you know, a gentleman burglar. And I saw Van Dyke going into the garden with you. The detectives had come with me. I followed you, and what I heard him say to you about a thousand years and all that rot made me see red, so I told the detectives I thought he was their man. Well—he was. Can you forgive me, little Ann?"

Ann shuddered in Carl's arms. "Don't call me that, just say Ann, rather crossly, as you usually do. Only now, Carl, I'm in love with you, you know."

"Ann darling."

"Carl," said Ann softly, "what was the news you were going to tell me this afternoon?"

"Well—" Carl hesitated. "Ann, it isn't very exciting. Only I've been offered a job at college after I am graduated, teaching in the psychology department. It means we could get married next year at commencement. Could you wait, Ann?"

"You silly," said Ann. "Of course."

Birth of Twins Causes Recorder Much Worry

Fresno, Calif.—Some day, when they are older, Jacques and Harry Esponde, twins, may be told what a bother they were to county vital statistics compilers.

Jacques first saw the light of day in an automobile speeding his mother, Mrs. Michel Esponde, to a hospital in Fresno. His brother was born a few minutes later at the hospital.

Jacques' birth finally was recorded in the county courthouse and Harry's at the city hall, after city and county officials called a number of conferences on what to do about it.

Silver of Astronomical Mirror

The silver of an astronomical mirror is always on the outer or front surface and not on the back as in a household looking glass. The light used by the observer is reflected from the silver itself, and does not pass through the glass of the mirror. Since the silver coat cannot be protected but must be exposed to the air, it deteriorates in a comparatively short time, and thus reduces the efficiency of the telescope. Impurities in the air cause the silver to tarnish, and moisture loosens small flakes of the metal from the glass. A few months after silvering, the surface shows a brownish hue and, when examined by placing a bright light behind, it is seen to be punctured by a multitude of small holes where particles of silver have become displaced.—Literary Digest.

Whittier's Personal Appearance

"In personal appearance John Greenleaf Whittier, the poet, was tall, erect, proportionately built, with a frame rather spare," his biographer says. "He walked alertly and with a firm step. In his later years after he became bald, he kept the white hair on the back of his head uncropped. He cultivated a beard that encircled his entire face. His forehead was narrow, high and receding. When his face, always mobile and youthful, was in repose, it was rather austere, yet lit up with geniality."

Flour From Bushel of Wheat

The amount of flour a bushel of wheat will make depends a lot on the mill and its condition. But the average 60-pound bushel of wheat will turn out 42 pounds of flour. Besides this amount of flour you can usually figure on about 9½ pounds of bran and an equal amount of shorts.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Swordtails Prolific

Swordtails and guppies frequently eat their young and it is usually best to take the parent fish from the tank where the young are soon after the fry appear. Broods of swordtails numbering 180 are recorded, but they are somewhat unusual. The number varies considerably, but 20 to 30 would be a good average.

Silver Persian Cats

The Silver Persian has been called the "Aristocrat of Catdom" and justly, for no other color has held public favor so long and so consistently. After a quarter century of competition with other colors and varieties, these cats still hold their own in all shows, and walk off with more than their share of prizes.

Poison Ivy and Poison Oak

Poison ivy and poison oak are not the same although they are often confused. Common poison ivy is usually found in the eastern half of the United States and Canada while the poison oak is more prevalent in the southern states, says Pathfinder Magazine. Each has three leaves; the ivy leaves are either smooth or few-toothed while those of the oak are notched, resembling oak leaves. Both of these plants may be in the form of shrubs or vines.

Worm-Catching Plants

Persons who may have thought that ferocious plants which capture and devour animals exist only in stories and the minds of their authors will be interested in a report by an official of the bureau of plant industry. These plants and their victims, he says, are so small as to be seen only through microscopes. They form a jungle from which they extend their feelers or limbs to capture the small worm-like animals as they pass along. The plant then releases a chemical strong enough to quickly dispose of the unlucky prisoner.

The Chihuahua Dog

One prominent dog authority has said that there is no other dog known to man that has had so much nonsense and ignorant misconception written about it than the Chihuahua. It was supposed to have been the product of cross breeding between various wild animals, including the Mexican squirrel, but this is all fallacy.

Mountains Commonplace, but Sea Is Mystifying

To a man reared on the western prairie who for the first time goes down to the seashore, it seems an inexplicable mystery that he can reach a place where the land actually comes to an end—before his eyes. He has read about it, observes a columnist in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, but nevertheless, there is the miracle; and usually he has to thoughtlessly get his shoes filled with the surf before he realizes the marvelous sliding powers of a rather innocent wave on the sand.

A commonplace soul will linger long by the sea, just looking. Mountains may be commonplace to him—made so by his western wanderings, but the ocean is not. And it never is, many times as he may afterward see it. One may climb over a mountain range and look down on the other side, but the seven seas have no end. They run the wide world around. Perhaps it is this sense of illimitability that so deeply impresses. It provokes the poetry, quoting it or writing it.

"Hansom Cab" Inventor Was Popular Architect

In 1833 Joseph Aloysius Hansom registered an invention with the British patent office—the drawings and model of "a one-horse, two wheel, safety vehicle"—and soon found a manufacturer for the article. So great was the demand that in 1840 he disposed of his patent at $50,000. The patent was to become known all over the world as the "hansom cab."

Hansom was born in York in 1803, and was educated as an architect, and when he died, June 29, 1882, and was buried at the Church of St. Thomas of Canterbury, Fullham, London, he had been several times declared a bankrupt, but had nevertheless managed to design important buildings all over England, notably St. Asaph's college, Darlington convent, St. Walpurge's at Preston, and Plymouth cathedral as well as churches at Ryde, Dalkeith, Leeds, Ripon, Acomb and Manchester.

Beetles Live Under Water

"Beetles with their anatomy all organized for breathing air, yet which live under water and get air to breathe only once in their lives, have been found in the cold, swift brooklets in the Great Smoky mountains, between Tennessee and North Carolina," says a Science News Letter. Those curious insects, it is explained, hatch under water and there pass their entire lives, except for a brief period after they have reached the pupal stage when they come out into the upper air for a short flight to insure their distribution. How it is that insects that have no gills or similar apparatus and only a small reservoir of air under their wing cases can exist under water for months is a puzzle to scientists. That their oxygen requirements are very low on account of their inactivity is the only explanation that has been offered for this phenomenon.

Bossy's Brew Above Limit, Owner Finds

Geneva, Ohio.—Capt. I. D. Howard, North Geneva farmer, still hopes he will not find Molly, his favorite cow, wearing four government padlocks some morning.

Several days ago, Molly got hold of some damp wheat that had soured.

"Molly is a fool cow, like all muley cows," said Captain Howard. "So, of course, she ate all the wheat that she could hold. The next morning when I milked, the foam overran the bucket and soaked my knees. Molly had turned herself into a brewery and far exceeded the legal 3.2 beer."

Causes of Quicksands

Quicksands usually occur on flat shores underlaid by stiff clay or other impervious materials. They appear to be formed by the continued collection of water within the sand bank, which is prevented from running off by the underlying impervious layer. The grains of quicksand have rounded surfaces. Quicksand is of very light weight. The infiltrated water separates and lubricates the particles, rendering them unable to support a heavy weight.

Power of a Telescope

The bureau of standards says that to determine the power of a telescope, focus it on a brick wall. With a little practice one can keep both eyes open, in which case one sees the wall directly with one eye, and sees the wall through the instrument with the other. If the magnified brick is as large as 10 unmagnified, the power of the telescope is 10. The telescope should be at least 100 feet from the wall.

The Maelstrom

The Maelstrom is a rapid current or tidal whirlpool off the northwest coast of Norway. It runs with the tide alternately six hours from north to south and six from south to north, producing immense whirls. When the wind is northwest and opposed to the reflux of waves, it attains its greatest fury, but in ordinary circumstances it can be traversed without difficulty.

Indians as Hunters

Contrary to the popular conception of the Indian as a mighty hunter, the Navajo tribe, perhaps the least modernized of all the American Indians, never hunt except for meat, and refuse to kill many animals that white men always have considered fair game. Conspicuous among the tabooed animals are the bear, coyote, owl, duck and rattlesnake.

Roman Gold Coins

Roman gold coins were issued about 217 B. C., and were called sestertii. The head of Mars appears on the early ones, followed by others with the head of young Janus and warriors swearing an oath over the body of a pig on the obverse. Still later, the issues of gold were resumed by Sulla in 83 B. C., and Julius Caesar in 45 B. C.

Java's Tea and Quinine

Much of the hill district in the Preanger Regencies in Java is devoted to tea and cinchona plantations. The cinchona groves of Java, which have developed from a few imported South American trees, now produce nearly nine-tenths of the world's supply of quinine. Behind barricaded walls in a factory in Bandoeng, quantities of the invaluable malaria specific are produced, and the Dutch protect their secret formulas by garnishing the factory's surrounding walls with barbed wire, just as if it were a diamond-mine compound.

Memorial to First Settler

Oberlin, Ohio, has a log hut memorial to Peter Pindar Pease, first settler in the community, 100 years ago.

Valuable Mahogany Tree

A great mahogany tree from West Africa, a real giant, brought almost $10,000 on the British market.

Calle Mercado, Bolivia, One of Highest Streets

One of the most intriguing as well as one of the highest streets in the world is the Calle Mercado, or market street, in La Paz, capital of Bolivia, which climbs steeply from the Plaza San Francisco, and is lined with dark little stalls hung with llama skins, Indian blankets and rugs, and overflowing with colorful pottery, blankets, carved bone replicas of Inca relics, dolls and jugs for chicha, the native drink of the west coast.

The street is full of action. Gamblers crowd around wheels of fortune. Orange-colored monkeys dance to the strains of a guitar. Llamas laden with rice, or coffee, step haughtily over the cobbles. Indian vendors bake maize in wide corn husks on the street. And Cholos sit on the sidewalk and spin bright-hued yarn. The Indians, topped with stiff hats and wrapped in blue or red ponchos have regular "character faces" bulging with cocoa leaves, which they all chew. The Cholos swirl along in a dozen garishly colored, billowing skirts—looking for all the world like beach umbrellas.

Beneath this fairy-tale city a river roars its way through valleys rich with oranges and bananas. Above it loom mountains holding a wealth of silver and semi-precious metals.

Olive One of the Oldest Fruits Known to World

There is one fruit with an ancient past, if there ever was one—the olive. It has been cultivated for 4,000 years and more.

The olive has always been a token of peace and purity. It is said that way back in the beginnings, when one country wanted to show off its good manners, it would present another country with a load of olive branches to be planted and grown into olive trees.

Pickle olive, similar to our green olives of today, have been found in the ruins of Pompeii.

Olives are a product of sunny lands—Spain, Italy, Greece, northern Africa and California.

Virtually all our green olives come from the sunny slopes of Spain. No one knows just when or how the process of curing olives was discovered—except that it was thousands of years ago. Every packer in Spain still has his own jealously guarded secret method of preserving olives. These familiar green olives, packed in glass, are carried by every grocer in the land.

Discovered Maple Syrup

The manufacture of maple syrup and maple sugar is purely an American industry. The first of the New England settlers exploring the Indian trails in the springtime saw the natives gashing trees with the tomahawks and sap flowing into hollow logs and bark containers. Soon maple sugar became the sugar of the early settlers, even as far south as Virginia and Kentucky. At first the white men followed the Indian method of producing maple syrup and sugar. But it was not long before they learned that the Indians' deep gashes in the trees often injured them. Tapping methods were improved, but the evaporation process has changed little, except that more modern equipment is often used.

Use for Elder Stalks

Elderberry is named Sambucus from the Greek name of an ancient stringed instrument, probably of Semitic origin, a harp with cords of different substances and lengths, but very unlike our modern harps, but made of the elder stalks. Some were small, like the Welsh harp, and others powerful and as big as the modern instrument. The sambucina were, in Greece, female harpists who mostly came from Egypt or from Asia and who played standing or sitting. Greek dancing girls who swayed to the music of the sambuca were of indifferent morals, often, but always beautiful. They swathed their bodies in a square white cloth which was held by fingertips.

Sharp Witted

Horses have long been known to possess an almost uncanny ability for recognizing old friends. An incident in Amesbury is a good sample of this. A man who had owned a particular horse for 13 years sold the animal to a milk concern. Later the horse was left standing on the street. Suddenly it spotted its old owner walking some disance away. With a bolt, it clattered after him, the milk wagon and bottles rumbling behind.

Birds Summer in Mountains

Birds that migrate up and down instead of north and south are reported by the Smithsonian Institution. During the hot season in Africa, which is winter here, they are found only on the mountain tops, but when the cold season approaches they return to the lowlands. This bird, which belongs to the finch family, has a marked partiality for aloe trees.—Pathfinder Magazine.

An Eisteddfod

An eisteddfod is a Welsh word applied to the assemblies of people meeting in competition in Welsh poetry, prose and music. Originally its purpose was to admit duly qualified individuals to the position of recognized bards or minstrels. It holds a high place in the intellectual life of the Welsh people. The national eisteddfod is attended by thousands of people.

Highest Altitudes

The highest altitudes in the United States are found in Pierce county, Washington; Wasatch county, Utah; Clackamas county, Oregon; Coconino county, Arizona; Lake county, Colorado; Custer county, Idaho; Carbon county, Montana; Esmeralda county, Nevada; Rio Arriba county, New Mexico; Freemont county, Wyoming.

Diamond History

India was the original home of the diamond as a jewel. For centuries India remained the sole source of Europe's diamond supply. About 1830 diamonds were discovered in Brazil. In 1867 diamonds were discovered in South Africa. South African diamonds constitute more than 90 per cent of the world's supply.

Rubber in Powder Form

Rubber in powder form is required in several of the processes of the industry, but its preparation has always been a rather complicated operation. Powdered rubber can be prepared for vulcanization in a rubber goods factory by mixing it with the necessary fillers and chemicals in revolving drums.

Colombia's Model Highway

A 162-mile, double highway, with more than 50 steel bridges has been completed in Colombia, South America. The highway, equipped its entire length with traffic signals, connects Barrayo, the terminal of the Tolima railway, with Florencia, Caqueta riverport in southern Colombia.

The "Lame Duck" Amendment

The Twentieth or "lame duck" amendment abolished the "lame duck" sessions of congress by having the terms of President and congress end in January instead of March; it also provides for the selection of a President in case the President-elect shall have died before inauguration.

Red-Painted Freight Cars Hot

Government tests have shown the interior of red-painted freight cars to be hotter than those painted yellow, but cooler than those with black paint exteriors.

Splitting Spider Webs

Spider webs used in certain scientific instruments in Europe are about .00015 of an inch in diameter, and some have to be split for specially delicate use.

Many Rural Delivery Trucks

More motor trucks are used in the rural free delivery of mail than in any other business. It is reported that 579,000 trucks are used by rural carriers.

Enable; Insure; Ensure

Enable means "to supply with adequate power, moral or physical; give authority; empower." It is used only in application to living things or their agents; that is, it expresses action, real or implied. Insure is used in the United States (and to some extent in England) not only in matters of insurance but also with the meaning "to make secure." Ensure is not commonly used in the United States, but in England it is now used in the one sense of "to make secure."—Literary Digest.

Horse in Australia

Almost every Australian family owns a horse, and every town has a horse racing track. That is the English influence in the country. Among the important horse races in the world are the Melbourne cup races held in Australia every November. In the larger cities there is a turf meeting at least three or four times a week. The people play a little golf.

Fertilization of Fish Eggs

The first record of artificial fertilization of fish eggs is of the practices of an Austrian monk, Dom Pinchon, who practiced methods of hatching trout. Artificial fertilization was rediscovered by Lieut. G. L. Jacobi in 1763. Fish farms were then established in Germany and the fish produced became an important article of commerce.

Seven Wonders of the World

The generally accepted list of the seven wonders of the world is as follows: the Pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging Gardens of Semiramis at Babylon, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Statue of Zeus by Phidias, the tomb of Mausolus, the Pharos (lighthouse) of Alexandria and the Colossus of Rhodes.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Diet of Navajo Indians

The orthodox Navajo will not eat fish, eggs or fowl. Some of the younger tribesmen who have been to school violate these prohibitions, but the old men keep them strictly. Traders occasionally sell tinned sardines to the Indians, but the purchaser invariably explains that, to his stomach, the sardines are medicine, not food.

Mediterranean Region's Climate

The climate of the Mediterranean region is warm, almost tropical. The mean temperature for the year is 57.5 degrees F. The winters are mild, but the summers are hot and almost rainless. The heat of the summer, however, is tempered in many localities by the sea breezes.

The English Setter

The generally accepted belief is that the English setter is the result of a cross between spaniels and the old Spanish pointers. English setters in America, while the offspring of a parent stock that had its origin in European countries, are the evolution of American sportsmen.

The Hemicycle

The word hemicycle means half circle. It is a curved or approximately semi-circular structure, as that of some arenas of an orchestra or part of a room; hence, a wall built in that form or a painting on such a wall, as the hemicycle of the Ecole des Beaux Arts.

Green Water Snakes

Green water snakes appear in South Carolina, despite scientific books which set their range through Florida and Louisiana and up the Mississippi river to Illinois.

The "Tow Bug"

The "tow bug" is also known as the cigarette beetle, and is found in stored tobacco and other stored products, such as the tow in overstuffed furniture. The larva is a white, fleshy, tiny grub. The adult is one-sixteenth of an inch long, brownish, its head bent back under its thorax. The larvae feed here and there through the food substance, and the beetles make small round holes in emerging. There are several generations annually under suitable conditions.
